I prepared for this assignment extensively by watching Arrival twice. The first time I watched it, I had several questions about why there was time travelling, and then the second time around enabled me to understand the future memories as opposed to time travelling.

Throughout the week, I attempted multiple time to organize that group and remind everyone that the assignment required us to watch the movie, discuss it together and produce our own analysis rather than rely on AI-generated content. Despite these efforts, most group members waited until the final day to watch the movie which made meaningful discussion difficult.

I completed my assigned analysis and discussed my interpretation with one teammate. The other two member worked independently without participating in group discussion. I also create a GitHub link at the request of a teammate that was ultimately never used.

As the deadline approached, I attempted to coordinate and participate in the final compilation of the written report and the PowerPoint presentation. However, with an hour remaining, one teammate who had planned to assemble the final materials stopped communicating. I attempted multiple times to reestablish communication but she would not respond. I then said I was going to bed.

I submitted my analysis and Nichelle ultimately compiled the final submission. I do not have access to the GitHub link and therefore do not know what is included in the final submission.

I am submitting my full contribution, personal reflection and analysis to you directly and I will prepare a simplified version for the group submission to avoid unnecessary conflict.
